

Threat Horizon 2021

About this webinar

Driven by demands for increased speed, automation and efficiency, organisations are about to face a period of significant technological upheaval. Digitisation promises much, and development of the next generation of technologies will bring significant benefits to business and society. To survive in the digital world organisations will have to adapt. To thrive, they will need to evolve. Exploiting digital interconnectivity, competing in the digital arena while understanding the implications of a digital cold war will all become business as usual challenges for industry over the coming months and years.

In this webinar, Steve Durbin, Managing Director, ISF will identify the key changes to the digital landscape over the next two years, focusing on emerging threats and means of mitigating their impact.
